SSDD: Same Shit Different Day
Greg Hall 87 minutes 15

A slice of life in the east end of London following Lee, recently released from prison, and Phil, a squatter and former rider, who both work night shift together.
Drama. London

Writer / Director Greg Hall came to early notice with his no-budget debut feature film "The Plague" (2004) when aged only 22. Receiving the inaugural Katrin Carlidge Foundation Award from Mike Leigh at the Sarajevo Film Festival, who described it as "very exciting 21st Century cinema".

"Kapital" (2007) his second feature film was a commission by the Manchester International Festival and a unique collaboration with renowned composer Steve Martland as a film-to-music project. Currently completed third feature "SSDD Same Shit Different Day" (2010), Greg Hall has also acquired the film rights to anarchist Ian Bone's autobiography "Bash The Rich" which he is currently adapting for the screen. www.brokebutmakingfilms.com

FRI 3rd SEPT - POP UP CINEMA

Holy Mountain¹⁸ selected/introduced by Dotmasters 6:30pm

This movie is nuts! A visual, visceral feast! Jodorowsky has been many things, occult leader, a cartoon collaborator, director and artist, but it's when he makes movies that i think he truly deserves the title of visionary. For me its a roller-coaster of religious barbaric beauty, meaning is secondary, i watched not even caring what it meant, i waited for the next assault and the next and the next and wasn't disappointed. A room of melting jesus's, iguanas in costumes this film has it all. Not for the faint hearted, perhaps viewed best with a small dose of mushrooms, after all it was acted by loons on the stuff.

As The Dotmasters, Leon has stencilled half toned masterpieces across the fronts of high profile galleries worldwide, poking fun at the sensibilities of the art world and the notions of vandalism. His work is always produced with an irreverent disregard for medium and wish for mischievous confrontation. There is no subculture, only subversion. www.c6.org

Performance¹⁸ selected/introduced by Blek Le Rat 8:30pm

I saw performance in 1970 for the very first time and maybe ten times in the years since. This avant-garde movie deals with all the topics young people cared about in the 1970's. Forty years later, sex, drugs, violence, music and art are still challenging priorities (for young people). "Requiem For A Dream" is witness and could be a sequel of it.

Blek le Rat was born Xavier Prou in Boulogne-Billancourt, Paris in 1952. He is considered the godfather of stencil graffiti art. He studied painting and architecture. He began his artwork in Paris in 1981. Since then he has had a great influence on today's graffiti and "guerilla art" movements, his main motivation being social consciousness and the desire to bring art to the people. British graffiti artist Banksy has acknowledged Blek's influence saying "every time I think I've painted something slightly original, I find out that Blek Le Rat has done it as well, only twenty years earlier".

I think why I love this film so much was as a child it was pure escapism. As an artist I still escape into my work, but when you're a kid films like the Star Wars films take you that one step further. Its like a music album that reminds you of an amazing holiday, to watch a film like The Empire Strikes Back can put you outside even your own universe. Whilst I'm not the kind of person who would dress up in all the gear and prance around with plastic light saber, I don't know of another collection of films that has whipped people up to form such a cult following as the star wars films. Love it.

Matt Clark exhibition Westbourne Studios courtyard: The ideas I work with often find their beginnings in various and diverse forms of popular culture from fables and religious text to ancient satire and political institutions, which are then altered and transformed into self created fictions of a rather different nature. The original sources are reinterpreted in order to illustrate playful stories of the uncertain and the fantastic: a time machine, a ship of fools, an alien signal broadcaster, a shrine to the Devil's tower. Through the artwork I make I aim to engage the audience by questioning their involvement and their role, reimagining them as performers upon an artistic stage.

Mr Hulot's
Holiday U
selected by
Inkie

It's the summer holiday season in Europe, and M. Hulot, like many others, has decided to spend his vacation at the French seaside, specifically at l'Hotel de la Plage resort. Hulot is a pretty quiet fellow, but that still does not stop him from getting into a lot of trouble while there. Although he does get along with many of the other resort guests - such as the Englishwoman who is amazed at the effectiveness of his unique tennis style, or the beautiful Martine - most, unfortunately, must deal with the bad outcomes of his unintentionally bumbling, albeit good-natured, actions.

After getting busted in 1988 in the UK's largest ever graffiti shutdown - codename Operation Anderson - Inkie went on to come second in the World Street Art Championships of 1989. He's continued for the past two decades to push the art in his own inimitable style and ways. Alongside Banksy he organized the largest ever UK graffiti event, a 1.4 km painting around the Bristol docks entitled 'Walls On Fire'.

Children must be accompanied by an adult.

Barbarella¹⁸
selected by
ThisIsBabooshka with live
painting

The story of a 41st Century Astronaut, Barbarella is the cult sci-fi film - loaded with sex appeal. ThisIsBabooshka will be performing and drawing street art in a unique live-art performance along with the film at the Portobello Film Festival 2010.

This work of art will grow and evolve, reflecting the themes, story and the fantastical images unfolding on screen. Taking in giant hookahs, torture devices and some of the sexiest images committed to celluloid, join ThisIsBabooshka as they bring Barbarella and art together in a journey you'll never forget...

Set up as an antidote to the male-dominated world of street-art, ThisIsBabooshka bring style, sex-appeal and a fresh perspective to art and live drawing.

Formed in Spring 2010 following a UK-wide talent search, more than 1,000 applications and a tough East London audition - ThisIsBabooshka have since taken art and design by storm.

Freestyle ¹⁸ introduced by Kolton Lee

8pm

Ondene (Lucy Konadu) is beautiful, talented, and destined to study law at Oxford if she gets the required A-Levels. Nothing less will satisfy her domineering mother, Hyacynth (Suzann McLean). When a basketball court is set up near her private school, Ondene is charmed by a charismatic, good-looking freestyle basketball player, Leon (Arinze Kene), and they decide to enter a competition.

From a deprived background, Leon dreams of going to university and needs to win to pay his way. Ondene deceives her mother to be with him, and romance blossoms, only to be crushed when Hyacynth finds out. Balancing her future prospects and her newfound passion, Ondene has to make tough decisions about her family, education, and the man she loves.

Featuring a fresh cast and a hot UK urban soundtrack selected by Bashy, Freestyle is an exciting, funny and heartwarming story that showcases the best in new British talent.

Kolton Lee is an award winning filmmaker, novelist and playwright. He has made two feature films: he was the Writer and Director behind the romantic comedy CHERPS (2007) and the Director behind the recently released FREESTYLE (2010), a street smart and snappy look at the world of Freestyle basketball.

He has also had his first novel published, noirish thriller THE LAST CARD, and the theatre piece – AN EVENING WITH MICHAEL JORDAN – performed at the National Black Theatre of Harlem. BRIXTON ROCK, his second theatre piece is currently with the TALAWA theatre company and is slated for production in 2012.

Kolton is currently in development on two feature film BURN! – a contemporary and hard boiled neo-noir thriller - and BRIXTON '81 – an adaptation of the novel EAST OF ACRE LANE, a coming of age tale set in the criminal underworld of Brixton in 1981.

SAT 11th SEPT - POP UP CINEMA

The Passion Of Joan Of Arc^{PG} with live soundtrack by In the Nursery

8pm

The Passion of Joan of Arc, directed by Carl Th. Dreyer in 1928, is considered one of the best silent films ever made.

Rene Falconetti gives one of the greatest performances ever recorded on film, as the young maiden who died for God and France.

The original version of the film was lost for decades, after a fire destroyed the master negative. Dreyer himself attempted to reassemble a version from out-takes and surviving prints, but he died believing his original cut was lost forever. Almost miraculously, a virtually complete print of Dreyer's original version was found in 1981.

IN THE NURSERY are specialists at providing new scores for classic silent films. Their first score was in 1996 for 'The Cabinet of Caligari', a project that has subsequently been performed around the world as part of their optical music series, which attracts new audiences to silent cinema. Twin brothers Klive & Nigel Humberstone utilise state of the art music technology, with a unique symphonic style, to produce hauntingly evocative soundtracks.

This new score reflects the film's dramatic highs and lows - from the emotional close-up photography of the trial through to the fevered final scenes surrounding Joan's death.

ARTIST'S EYE

SUN 12th SEPT - POP UP CINEMA

The Boat^U selected and introduced by Patrick Hughes

8pm

Paintings and sculpture are stills, chosen to be significant moments in time. Artists have tried to represent movement - the Futurists had a good go at it - but it is hard to do. Movement came naturally to Buster Keaton, he learnt his subtly expressive moves as a child performer in the English music-halls. In his two-reel short, The Boat, a masterpiece of failure, Keaton is in a terrible storm at sea. He throws out his lifebelt and it sinks: this is inevitably only a short shot. Then he casts out his anchor and it floats, which shot lasts longer and is sadder and funnier.

As an artist I have been interested in contradictory objects like Man Ray's flat iron with a row of tin tacks down its spine (1924) and Meret Oppenheim's fur cup, saucer, and spoon of 1936. Buster's floating anchor is similarly daft. Perhaps anchors were cast from wooden patterns and Keaton found one and realised it could be used in a film. A verbal oxymoron, like "loud silence" or "living death" or "darkness visible", has an adjective which contradicts its noun. In a visual oxymoron the thing, the anchor, is the noun, and the material - wood - is the adjective which contradicts it. I have painted grey rainbows, stations that move past trains, the end of infinity, and lots of solid space. I am having solo shows in Miami and New York in December, and next year, in July, I will have a retrospective exhibition in London celebrating fifty years as an artist exhibiting contradictory things. www.reverspective.com

Andrew Logan belongs to a unique school of English eccentrics. One of Britain's principal sculptural artists, he challenges convention, mixes media and plays with our artistic values. Since its beginnings, Logan's work has depended on the inventive use of whatever was to hand. With flair and fantasy he transformed real objects into their new and different versions. His artistic world includes fauna, flora, planets and gods. His love of travel provides the bases for several series of work.

UNERHÖRT! is one of the few film festivals worldwide dedicated to music films. Since 2006 this is the mission of a group of music nerds from Hamburg and Berlin, who are also experts for music films outside the mainstream, across genres, formats and countries of origin. The non-profit UNERHÖRT! Music Film Festival is an institution amongst music and film fanatics in Germany and globally. Its mission is to show great music films at the cinema, films which otherwise disappear too quickly from view. The next UNERHÖRT! Music Film Festival will be held in Hamburg, December 2-5, 2010. www.unerhoert-filmfest.de

Talks by

Birgit Herdlitschke - a renowned director for TV, mainly ARTE, focussing on music, art, subcultures.

Christine Enterlein - Falling in love with UNERHÖRT! after watching the Blondie doc "One Way or Another" at the 2nd edition of the festival in 2008, Christine joined the festival team shortly afterwards.

Ralf Schulze is the festival director of UNERHÖRT! Hamburg and Berlin. In his normal life, he is a music publisher and music supervisor for film and TV.

Holland House Arts Salon

At the Holland House arts salon of the early 19th century liberal hospitality was shown to politicians, poets, popular novelists and painters. On Napoleon's banishment after Waterloo, amongst the busts of Whig worthies in Holland Park appeared the Napoleon of Notting Hill by Canova. Lord Holland is in the painting at Kensington Palace when Victoria became queen in 1837. His son, the fourth and final Baron Holland, Henry Edward Fox was a patron of the local Pre-Raphaelite painter GF Watts.

Applicants for Admission to a Casual Ward

Luke Fildes' painting of Victorian slum poverty depicting a dole queue outside a police station, where claimants had to register to get tickets to the workhouse, was sketched in 1869 'somewhere near the Portland road.' Luke Fildes lived on Melbury Road in Holland Park. When Charles Dickens saw 'Applicants', he immediately commissioned Fildes to illustrate The Mystery of Edwin Drood. Dickens' other illustrators, 'Phiz' Hablot K Browne and George Cruikshank, both have North Kensington memorials.

Lord Leighton Leighton House on Holland Park Road off Kensington High Street, with its renowned Arab Hall, is a monument to the Victorian artist Lord Leighton who specialised in Oriental exotica. The house was the centre of the 'Holland Park Circle' art scene on Holland Park Road and Melbury Road, including Luke Fildes, William Holman Hunt, Phil May, Marcus Stone, Harno Thornycroft and GF Watts. The Arab Hall has been described as 'the most sensuous room in London'.

Pre-Raphaelites The writer Violet Hunt was born into the Campden Hill Pre-Raphaelite scene. Her archetypal arty Notting Hill society has been described as 'having a certain Bohemian flavour, it nevertheless dressed for dinner.' Ford Madox Ford, the half-German grandson of the Chelsea Pre-Raphaelite painter Ford Madox Brown, thought of Campden Hill as 'a high class Greenwich Village in which all the artists should be wealthy, refined, delicate and well-born.' Shortly after his arrival on the hill, Ford renewed his Pre-Raphaelite link with Violet Hunt as she was moving into South Lodge, 80 Campden Hill Road.

Wyndham Lewis/Vorticism

Violet Hunt and Ford's South Lodge on Campden Hill became the HQ of Wyndham Lewis and Ezra Pound's Vorticist art revolution prelude to World War 1; featuring Blast, Lewis's Review of the Great British Vortex, clashes with the Italian Futurists and proto-punk rock Vorticist clothes designed by Violet Hunt. In the 30s Lewis contributed to the fascist paper the British Union Quarterly. At this most dubious stage in his career, he moved to 29a Kensington Gardens Studios at Notting Hill Gate where, after undergoing various operations, he got out of his art fascist groove and attempted to make amends.

Dada/Surrealism Max Ernst/Kurt Schwitters

The Dadaist/Surrealists Max Ernst and Kurt Schwitters stayed up the hill whilst in exile from the Nazis. The first victim of the local serial killer John Christie of 10 Rillington Place, Ruth Fuerst, was the daughter of the Viennese painter Ludwig Fuerst.

Caribbean Artists Movement

In the mid 50s the Lonely Londoners author Sam Selvon moved into a Colville basement, where he was joined by the rest of the Caribbean Artists Movement. Rachman's main Polish protégé rent collector was Serge Paplinski, a former partisan-turned-St Martin's art student. Ken Sprague's etching of the 1959 murder of Kelso Cochrane features a Nazi stormtrooper urging on the Teddy boy assailant on Southam Street.

Lucian Freud

Lucian Freud dates back to the old Notting Hill art drinking scene that revolved around the Windsor Castle pub on Campden Hill Road, also featuring Dylan Thomas, and the proto-

Gilbert and George Robert Colquhoun and Robert MacBryde. Freud's 'Large Interior W11' painting from 1979, which sold for £3.5 million in 1998, is described as the 'masterpiece of Britain's greatest living artist' 'The Hermit of Holland Park' has since become renowned for his portraits of Leigh Bowery, Sue Tilly the 'Benefits Supervisor Resting', and Kate Moss who famously posed for him up the hill in 2002.

Bridget Riley The Op-artist Bridget Riley lives off Holland Park Avenue. A contemporary of Peter Blake and Frank Auerbach, she came up with her own Op Art movement in the early 60s, consisting of disorientating black and white geometric designs. Op art was closely linked to psychedelic happening ideas of opening the doors of perception. Bridget Riley became disillusioned with Op when it became commercialised and got into colour stripe painting in 1967. Of her later colour material, 'Shadow Play' from 1990 is most renowned.

David Hockney

Powis Terrace/Hedgegate Court, the most notorious Rachman street, became further renowned in the 60s for David Hockney's studio and the psychedelic London Free School. The Hockney documentary film A Bigger Splash by Jack Hazan and David Mingay is partly set in the studio-flat at the north end of the street, with diversions to the fashion designer Celia Birtwell's on Arundel Gardens. In 1971 he painted the famous 'Mr and Mrs Clark and Percy', Ossie Clark and Celia Birtwell and their cat in Notting Hill. In the 80s he painted Celia Birtwell again for Vogue — her shop is now at 71 Westbourne Park Rd.

Gustav Metzger/Fluxus/Yoko Ono

The Free School adventure playground on Acklam Road was inaugurated with a Gustav Metzger auto-destructive art performance. This consisted of the local kids burning a pile of rubbish. Gustav Metzger was and still is part of the Fluxus avant-garde art movement, which also includes Yoko Ono and influenced Jimi Hendrix and the Who.

The Boyle Family

Mark Boyle and Joan Hills did psychedelic shows at the UFO club and on tour with Soft Machine and Jimi Hendrix. The Boyle Family specialised in artwork made from rubbish found at randomly selected sites around Notting Hill. In 'The Street' happening of 1964 they took their audience down Pottery Lane into Notting Dale, to a door marked 'theatre'. Once inside the participants found themselves facing a curtain which was drawn back to reveal the Crown pub corner, and whatever happened in the street was the performance art.

Hapshash And The Coloured Coat

The psychedelic Princedale Road hosted Oz magazine and Hapshash and the Coloured Coat. The Oz designer Martin Sharp came up with the sleeve of Cream's 'Disraeli Gears', Dylan, Donovan, Legalise Pot and Vincent van Gogh posters. Hapshash and the Coloured Coat was the psychedelic design team of Michael English and Nigel Weymouth, responsible for Pink Floyd, Hendrix, Who and UFO club posters. The London Free School member Nigel Weymouth also co-founded the King's Road shop Granny Takes A Trip.

King Mob

The most enduring legacy of the 1968 student revolution in Notting Hill was the graffiti. The writing on the walls, largely attributed to the Situationist King Mob group, included Romantic poetry by William Blake, Coleridge and Shelley. Blake's 'The tigers of wrath are wiser than the horses of instruction' on Basing Street was tagged with 'Rent revolt' and 'QPR Loft End agro'. The leading British Situationist Chris Gray, the editor of the King Mob Echo paper who lived on Cambridge Gardens, is credited with originating the 'unpleasant pop group' punk rock idea.

Richard Adams

The office of the last incarnation of the underground paper Frenz was at 2 Blenheim Crescent, above the Dog Shop (now Minus Zero record shop). The Oz designer Richard Adams moved up Blenheim Crescent from Princedale Road to carry on designing the last issues of IT, Oz and Frenz with Barney Bubbles. After the final episode of the radical Friends/Frenz series came in 1974, in the wake of the Whole Earth Catalogue, they produced the Index of Possibilities journal featuring Michael Moorcock sci-fantasy stories.

Paul Simonon

Paul Simonon recalls West Indian rudeboys on Golborne Road laughing at Joe Strummer and Mick Jones as they modelled his paint-splattered Jackson Pollock look. Simonon went to Byam Shaw art school on Campden Hill and performed the original scrapper Clash backdrop. The group first promoted themselves with a graffiti campaign featuring 'The Clash' on a Westway station near Royal Oak. Some early Clash posters were designed by Sebastian Conran.

Jamie Reid In the run-up to the Queen's silver jubilee in 1977, Virgin promoted the Sex Pistols' 'God Save the Queen' single, in Jamie Reid's safety-pinned queen picture sleeve, from Vernon Yard on Portobello. In the first promo stunt for the record the Pistols posed for photos under a 'Long Live the Queen' banner outside the off-license at 120 Kensington Park Road and being questioned by a policeman along Westbourne Grove. Next door to the site of the off-license is now an Agent Provocateur shop founded by Joe Corre, the son of the Pistols manager Malcolm McLaren and Viv Westwood.

Futura2000/Hip-Hop Graffiti Art

The first hip-hop tag graffiti in the area by Futura2000 appeared on Freston Road and under the Westway around 1978. In 1981 the Clash posed for the cover of Zigzag magazine in front of the Apocalypse Hotel squatted pub on Freston Road, Mick Jones already with a hip-hop ghettablaster. For the rest of the 80s Futura2000 graffiti marked the spot of the punky hip-hop party. Futura appeared on stage with the Clash doing graffiti and rapped on 'Overpowered by Funk' on 'Combat Rock'

Damien Hirst

Damien Hirst's Pharmacy Brit pop art restaurant opened at 150 Notting Hill Gate in 1998, causing yet more local celebrity press gossip featuring the usual suspects including Kate Moss and Geri Halliwell (who they refused to serve unless she was without her pet dog). Damien Hirst had previously featured in the Roughler local mag of Ray Jones whose autobiography Drowning On Dry Land has just been published to great critical acclaim. In 2004 Hirst appeared on the cover of the relaunched Roughler with a spanner up his nose.

Jamie Hewlett/Gorillaz

At the end of Brit pop in the late 90s the Blur frontman Damon Albarn formed Gorillaz, his animated punky hip-hop concept group with Jamie Hewlett in North Kensington. The cartoon pop West 10 World incorporating Trellick Tower and the Westway was created at Buspace Studios on Conlan Street, and Westbourne Studios by the Westway; also home to Blur's management. Jamie Hewlett had previously drawn the Tank Girl comic strip filmed in 1994.

Banksy

Banksy continued the Westway graffiti tradition with his Che Guevara stencils on the Portobello Railway Bridge (succeeding 'Nuclear waste fades your genes' and 'Banksy' on the Ladbroke Grove bridge. An early 'laugh now but one day we'll be in charge' Banksy monkey ordained the wall by the Elgin along Ladbroke Grove. Stencil graffiti had previously been a feature of the 60s 'Open the Squares' campaign and the anarcho-punk movement of the 80s. He also maintains the Bristol-Ladbroke Grove tradition of the Pop Group/Rip Rig & Panic. At the 2004 Carnival Banksy £10 notes with Princess Diana's head instead of the queen were thrown into the crowd. The following year his 'Crude Oils' show at 100 Westbourne Grove famously featured live rats running about the gallery

MuTATE Britain

In the run up to the 40th anniversary of the opening of the Westway there has been a resurgence in counter-culture activity under the flyover. In 2009 Joe Rush returned with the Mutoid Waste Company and the MuTATE Britain: One Foot in the Grove gallery of radical techno art and graffiti, in the former Acklam Road adventure playground bays off Portobello Rd.

The MuTATE line-up featured: Mode 2 of the legendary Chrome Angels (who also featured 3D Robert de Naja of Massive Attack), Paul Insect, Shepherd Fairey of Obama stencil fame, Banksy's printer Chu, Babsy, BASH, Brett Ewins, Nick Reynolds, Snug, Inkie, Dr D, Alex Wreckage from the Mutoids' Time Machine (which won Andrew Logan's 2009 Alternative Miss World at the Roundhouse), Giles Walker robots and local pop psychogeography tiles on the toilets.

Breaking news: Portobello Film Festival neighbour in ACAVA studios W10, Angela De La Cruz has been shortlisted for this year's Turner prize.
